When did Caterpillar start shipping parts and service information?

In the 1980s, like many manufacturers, Caterpillar was shipping tons of printed parts and service information to dealers every month. It wasn't just new product parts and service information we needed to distribute. Add to it the thousands of annual updates for existing and legacy products, and the amount of data was overwhelming.

What is Caterpillar SIS web?

SIS Web provides access to more than 17,000 publications on all Caterpillar machine and engine product lines. With SIS Web, you can look-up machine part numbers for online ordering through Parts.Cat.com, plus view operation & maintenance instructions, assembly & disassembly instructions, service manuals and much more.

Why did Caterpillar move to CD-ROM libraries?

To manage the mountains of printed paper, Caterpillar moved to CD-ROM libraries in the early 1990s, and later turned to print-on-demand solutions. Even so, the volume of information continued to grow, and the need for a portable digital solution was evident.
