I am using ex Honda FIT EV LTO 20ah cells for my prototype Nimh to Lithium CRZ conversion. You of course can use whatever Lithium cells you want as long as they meet a few critical criteria. These are a few guidelines and recommendations based on my long experience with Lithium, EV's and IMA conversions. 1) Use a safe Lithium chemistry.

Norio Tomobe, project leader of the CR-Z, stated that Honda will only keep the NiMH battery in stock for 10 years after production ended on the 2011/12 model. So after 10 years from now, it might be difficult to get a replacement battery for a 2012 model.

Nimh versus Lithium Part 1.. Note superior calendar longevity of Lithium versus Nimh cells has not yet been proven. Some early IMA cars are happily trundling around with original Nimh packs that work and are over 20 years old. We have at least another ten/twelve years to go with Lithium IMA cars before they catch up to that long a real world test. On paper ...
