The clock is made entirely from Lego pieces, except for the string and weight. However, i don't anticipate this becoming a problem because many other sets come with string, and the weight is extremely easy to make at home. (Mine is just a soda can full of pennies). One of the best things about the clock is that there is no adjusting required ...

Chris Orchard and Brent Waller's collaborative Clockwork Solar System has already been rejected by the LEGO Ideas review board in the third 2021 review and the second 2022 review, but the dynamic duo - steadfast in their ambition to get the green light - resubmitted the model again in February 2023. Almost a year to the day later, it's now racked up 10,000 ...

42 - Sea Turtle - 2C - Nice looking MOC. Doesn't really belong as an UCS-type Lego Ideas set. 43 - Tatatouille - 1D - Looks bigger than a modular corner. This is way too big for the subject matter. Won't get picked. 44 - Solar System - 1D - Slightly better than Orrery (above), but will not get made. 45 - Bluey! - 4B - This show is amazing for kids.

without hitting any obstacles. Clockwork Solar System joins LEGO Ideas Third 2021 Review Stage as the sixth set entry.

The mechanical model features all eight planets in our solar system, recreated in proportion to one another, all circling in orbit. Perhaps the most impressive feature of the Clockwork Solar System is how each planet's orbital timing is almost exact (the builders say it's "over 99.8% accurate") relative to the others.
